Lucky Lovers in for a Wedding Treat Courtesy of AsianBeauties

February 25, 2010 – Honeymoons traditionally account for one of the most significant slices of a wedding budget such is the desire to explore the world together after a blissful marriage. According to the Condé Nast American Wedding Study happy couples now spend an average 14% of their big day funds on a romantic adventure with 63 per cent travelling overseas. It's well accepted that seeing the sights and wedlock are fine bedfellows when it comes to the perfection of enduring love.

Nowadays it's also common for couples to take passion and travel one step further when building firm foundations in a relationship. International dating has become highly popular with a large number of men currently meeting their future wives abroad while discovering different cultures during a vacation. Online dating site AsianBeauties.com unites men from the west with beautiful Ladies from the Orient and gives them the incredible opportunity to join a Romance Tour and meet hundreds of beauties face-to-face.

In a move to take matchmaking to the next level, AsianBeauties launched a great offer during the last Romance Tour to China that ran from 10-18 December 2010. With the aim of inspiring the sweet sound of wedding bells, five lucky couples were given the opportunity to walk down the aisle within six months of the trip and receive the gift of a $5,000 honeymoon. By the end of the fabulous journey to breathtaking Chongqing three couples had already confirmed they were an item and now begin the race to exchange vows by June 18 in order to receive the rousing prize.

Spurred on by the growing number of success stories on AsianBeauties the honeymoon challenge has now been extended to the next Chongqing Romance Tour that takes place from 11-19 March 2011. For those fresh into matrimony a tranquil honeymoon will undoubtedly be one of the finest occasions with which bride and groom can kick-off their new life together.
